FoxWhen you sit down for a Halloween-themed TV viewing experience, it's often about spooky, creepy, and thrilling (Stephen King's it, anyone?) But it's not necessary. Some of the best TV series have aired fun Halloween-themed episodes that you'll laugh instead of crying in fear. In the first holiday-themed episode of the animated series, Bob attended the Halloween party and ended up in a fat suit, thinking he might accidentally kill a pet guinea pig. Children, meanwhile, come out trick-or-treat themselves. When they decided to go into a more polished neighborhood for a better treat (a full-size candy bar!), they encountered some menacing teenagers who wanted to terrorize young trick-or-treaters and, of course, the theft occurred. Hulu Michael had to erase someone before the end of the month, but had put it. After unsuccessfully trying to extinguish the fire some members of the force, he ended up biting bullets and extinguishing the Devon fire, on the day of the Halloween party. Fittingly dressed as a two-headed version of herself, Michael told the man dressed in a vampire costume that he could spread his wings and fly wherever he wanted. Cuch, Netflix is no shortage of classic episodes in the Park and Rec catalogue, but this one is famous for a number of reasons. First, it featured the great Louis C.K. in her finally awkward role as boyfriend Leslie (Amy Poehler). Second, it was the first ever (and perhaps the funst ever) signing character appearance of Andy Dwyer (Chris Pratt), Burt Macklin, FBI. Ultimately, it introduced us to criminal domination in the training and nemesis of Leslie's intrepid, Greg Pikitis. For the cherry above, we get to watch Tom Haverford (Aziz Ansari) dawn of the ridiculous/impressive T-Pine costume. Hulu Netflix Leave it to Southern Park to transform one of the weirdest and most melodramatic bands of his age, the Nu-metal band Korn, into something healthy, namely the Scooby-Doo crew. Episodes from the classic adult animated series featured everything from Antonio's sex dolls to lynch mob and nekophilia. It's not for everyone, but fans of the show will appreciate the brilliant cocktail of morbid humor and child-like wonders that only the South Park can achieve. Hulu Hulu Meat served at the Halloween party on campus makes several attendees sick with zombie-like symptoms, and speed occurs as they try to contain infected. Seeing it all down with our favorite characters dressed as David Beckham, Lady Gaga, and Captain Kirk add to the excitement of this episode usually creative from Dan Harmon's minds (Rick and Morty). Hulu Remembers that time when Chandler ended up with a pink bunny dress, somehow nobody understood the costume of Ross' Spud-nik, and Phoebe caused the split of her twin sister, Ursula, and the newly minted fiancé Eric, played by guest star Sean Penn? Better than this episode is Rachel's attempt to give her a turned candy into her doing money and writing checks for children, and impersonating a young boyfriend. It was full of regular series hijinks, kicked notch by silly clothes. Netflix Referenced earlier in the series, the slutty pumpkin was a Ted girl meeting at a rooftop Halloween party a year, which dressed in frumpy pumpkin costumes with clever cuts. He accidentally lost numbers, and has attended every Halloween event since in the hope he will return. In this episode, she eventually found her adorable subject (played by Katie Holmes) and found that (shocking!) they weren't meant to be. The best part of the episode was Barney's stance towards discovering him a quarter of Canadians with the most patriotic costume-clad impliable. Hulu Netflix Dunphys are preparing their annual Halloween party and haunted home, but nothing seems to be right despite Claire's best efforts. The associated storyline adds to the excitement, including Phil's concerns about not spontaneous and sexy, and Gloria's discomfort about her accent. Funniest, Mitchell pointed out to his new job in superhero clothes, mistakenly thinking everyone was going to dress up, then squeezed around to hide the ultra tight getup under the spare suit he had in the car. Not now a streaming in her typical surly style, Larry has zero interest in handing over candy to teenagers who come knocking without wearing clothes. The kids responded with the toilet-paper her home and spray painted some not so nice words at her door. Citing previous changes that saw Larry accused of being self-devastating Jews, he considered the incident a hate crime against bald people. HBO It's hard to choose one of these 28 annual episodes as best, as they've all been pretty brilliant, with countless parodies of films, books, radio shows or TV, from Dusk Zone to The Shining. But one of the best is the 2008 episode XIX, which includes How To Progress in dead veritising. It's crazy Male parody, with need to kill celebrities so that advertisers can use their similarities freely. There's also The Great Pumpkin, Milhouse, which spoils It's a Big Pumpkin, Charlie Brown, who will you find later on our list. Not streaming When Jake boasts it proud of it Would make criminals better than the many of those they arrested, Holt put him to task for trying and stealing Valor's medal before the clock attacking 12. Jake accepts, and is included in a complicated scheme movement. The episode inspired the tradition, in which every Halloween episode next season saw officers at the duke it's precinct out to determine who could draw a detailed false heist. Hulu No great List of Halloween TV episodes will be complete without this Charlie Brown out. In this iconic animation special, which was first aired in 1966, Linus is convinced that there is a Great Pumpkin. After writing and sending letters to characters like Santa, he decided to release a hat-or-treat and Halloween party to wait for hope in a local pumpkin patch for the arrival of the proper holiday figure.
